Al Lee is a forensic accountant and economic damages expert with over 30 years of experience. During his career, he has been appointed as an expert in over 30 matters.

Al has provided oral and written testimony in state court, federal court and in arbitration proceedings across a variety of industries and business disputes, including construction, commercial damages, and labor and employment matters. He has also assisted expert and other witnesses on hundreds of disputes in litigation and arbitration.

Al has a broad background as a consultant, including analyzing the financial condition and financial performance of businesses through the review of financial statements, public disclosures, accounting information, operational reports, and other business records. He has also investigated liability and damages issues on matters involving allegations of fraud. Al has prepared or analyzed hundreds of construction claims for cost and schedule impacts on a variety of construction projects including oil processing facilities, liquid natural gas facilities, power plants, mining facilities, roadways, rail transportation, subway stations, tunnels, and pipelines.

Al specializes in the analysis of claims for increased costs, lost profits, loss of business value, unjust enrichment, and reasonable royalties on a variety of disputes resulting from breach of contract, business interruption, patent infringement, and other allegations. He delivers expert analysis and opinions regarding economic damages on construction matters, labor and employment disputes (including class action matters), as well as potential fraud and false claims (including damages and penalties resulting from such issues). He has also supported clients on matters involving cost accounting, cost estimating, defective pricing, false claims, and regulatory compliance issues.

Al holds a Master of Business Administration degree in finance and accounting and a Bachelor of Science degree in electrical engineering and computer science. He is a member of the Institute of Management Accountants and the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners.
