Ryan LaMotta is an economic and damages expert with over 15 years of experience. He has been retained as the named expert on over 75 matters.

Ryan has provided credible testimony on numerous cases with disputed values of up to US$100 million. He has testified on matters before the International Trade Commission (ITC) and in federal district court proceedings across the United States.

Ryan provides consulting services focusing on economic damages, intellectual property licensing, and monetary remedies for clients across a wide range of industries. His experience includes a wide range of matters involving international trade violations, patent infringement, theft of trade secrets, breach of contract, copyright and trademark infringement, valuation disputes, and business interruption.

Ryan's expertise resides at the intersection of international trade disputes and intellectual property disputes. He specializes in complex financial analysis, economic and domestic industry assessments, economic damages and remedy quantification, business valuation, and intellectual property matters. He provides analysis and testimony regarding the economic prong of domestic industry requirements, remedy, and bonding as part of Section 337 ITC investigations.

Ryan is a Certified Licensing Professional and holds a master's and bachelor's degree in business administration. He is a member of the International Trade Commission Trial Lawyers Association, the National Association for Business Economists, the Licensing Executive Society, the Houston Intellectual Property Law Association, and the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners. Clients comment on Ryan's clear, practical, and credible presentation of opinion and appreciate his ability to cut through complex issues to identify practical solutions.
